SUMMER IN TOWN.

THE sun on the Avenue glistens
As it glimmers and gleams through the trees,
And one stands in the glitter and listens
For the murmur of harps in the trees.
It is morning—just after eleven ;
All you need is the harp and the crown ;
For the city is very like Heaven,
Though every one's gone out of town !

Delmonico's dull as a grave is,
At the Waldorf the band doesn't play ;
A cabby your absolute slave is,
For every one else is away.
How shocked they would be could they see us :
You all tanned—I in last summer's gown,
And oh, think how they'd just long to be us,
Unchaperoned here in the town !

We dine at the jolliest places,
At queer open air table d'hotes ;
And study the types and the faces
That we meet on the railways and boats.
And here in the sweet golden weather,
Fate doesn't dare on us to frown ;
It's such fun to be larking together
With every one else out of town !

Kate Masterson.

NECESSARY INFORMATION.

If there is anything about yacht-racing which the veteran captains and accomplished owners of the yacht Defender have still to learn, it is very desirable that it should be taught to them thoroughly and impressively before they are called upon to sail their boat against Lord Dunraven's Valkyrie. Their performance against the British boat ought not only to be absolutely fair and sportsmanlike, but it should be above suspicion, and above the criticism which John Bull is never likely to withhold. Mr. Willard, of the Vigilant, has declared that in some of the races Defender has sailed against Vigilant, her handling has not been sportsmanlike, and being debarred both from running the new boat down and, for good reasons, from lodging more than one protest against her, he withdrew his boat from further preliminary matches. Neither the New York Yacht Club's committee nor the Defender's people admit that Mr. Willard has just grounds of complaint, but it is the outspoken opinion of a great many expert yachtsmen that Defender has imposed upon his forbearance, and that he did right to withdraw.

It was the undertaking of the Vigilant to race the Defender as often as possible, and help in that way in tuning her up, and it is a pity of course that she should be withdrawn. But it is more important that the American yacht that sails against Valkyrie should be fairly sailed than that she should win, and if Mr.

Willard has given the Defender's people a lesson in manners, which they needed, he has done a more important service to sport than he could have done by continuing to race. Possibly Defender has not violated the rules, but certainly she has not kept herself above suspicion. If her captains are disposed to be too smart, it is a thousand times preferable that the results of that propensity should be worked out in unimportant competitions with the Vigilant than that doubtful manners should breed bad blood in an international contest.

It has been hinted that Mayor Strong, having let a particularly energetic genii out of a bottle, would be a good deal relieved if he could borrow the great seal of Solomon long enough to get him back. Mr. Theodore Roosevelt is the genii, and the Mayor has been supposed to be apprehensive that Mr. Roosevelt's enforcement of the Sunday liquor law in New York will have a bad effect upon the Republican party in the next election. LIFE is sorry for the Mayor if indeed he has any such misgivings, but it does not see any very lively prospect of the abatement of his anxieties. Mr. Roosevelt is the sort of a genii who likes to make a thorough job and does not care very much who gets hurt. LIFE trusts that he will work the Sunday saloon problem out to its legitimate conclusions.

If the people of New York want the saloons open on Sunday they ought to be able to get laws passed that will make the trade in Sunday cocktails lawful. If they don't want saloons open on Sunday it is proper that they should accept their share of the responsibility for Mr. Roosevelt's work. Mr. Roosevelt as police commissioner will probably enforce in New York any kind of a Sunday liquor law the State Legislature will consent to pass, but so long as the present law continues operative it is very unlikely that he and his colleagues can be induced to give it the sort of limited application that used to be so profitable to Tammany. In the matter of Sunday closing it seems easier, safer and more profitable for the Mayor and all Republicans to follow in Mr. Roosevelt's wake than to try to head him off.

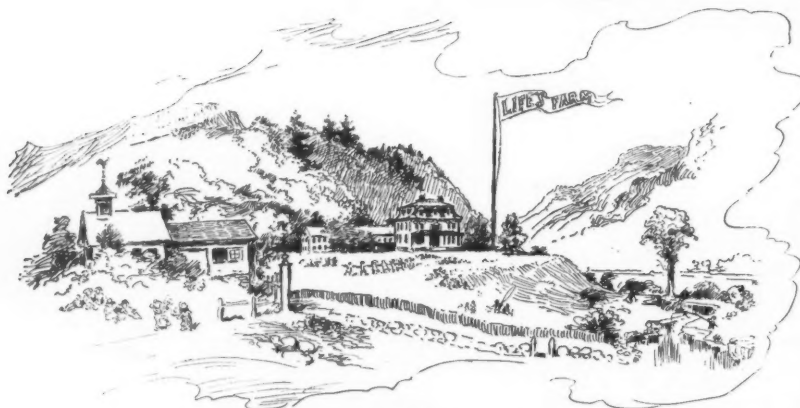

THE massacre of English missionaries at Kucheng, China, makes it all the more imperatively desirable that the political insolvency of the Middle Kingdom should be acknowledged and a receiver appointed to take charge of its affairs. There might be another way—to withdraw all the missionaries from China and let the Chinese drift to perdition at their leisure, but that method would accord neither with the spirit nor the habits of the times. The Manchus cannot keep the Chinese in order; the Japanese are not to be allowed to do so. Who will take the job?

"IS IT SO FINE A THING TO BE A QUEEN?"

THERE has been an epidemic of royal ladies in fiction during the past year—a revival of an old form of romance which probably dates from "The Prisoner of Zenda." The writers of republican America have recently shown particular fondness for dallying with royalties, as is evidenced by "The Princess Aline," "The Princess Sonia" and "The Countess Bettina."

The latest comer in the royal retinue is "Her Majesty" (Putnam), by Elizabeth Knight Tompkins. This is the love story of a young queen, who tired of playing her lonely part and took a ten days' holiday and mingled with her people. She is a very modern young woman, and has all the ideas and some of the slang that are easily acquired at an American girls' college. True, she missed that experience, but she had an advanced governess who put her in possession of the essentials, and she read American novels.

She is, altogether, a very fascinating personage—a most humane and lovable woman, who deserved a better fate than to be a queen, and who, in the end, managed to get what she wanted.

THE story is written with a charming style; it has grace and ease, and very pretty unexpected turns of expression. Moreover, there is a gentle and pervasive sense of humor that saves the whole tale from the category of artificial things and makes it real, human and sympathetic. Of all the recent royalties in fiction, Honorina seems to us the one most easy to domesticate at an American hearthstone. As the young Englishman who met her said, she is "the jolliest girl I ever knew."

There is just a dash of sociology in the book, enough to show that at heart the queen is a serious person, worthy of the love of a sober-minded man. But what makes it a success is its idyllic love story. Nothing prettier of this kind is in recent stories than the description of the Sunday morning which Hugo and Honorina spent in the old garden.

Then there is the flight from the kingdom during the revolution, and the night in the old castle that suggests an episode in "Prince Otto" (a most trying comparison for any clever author). But it is all so well done that the wildest things seem probable, and the most daring and unconventional are the most modest.

It is a satisfaction to say that "Her Majesty" is a far better novel than most of the foreign atrocities that have been pushed into popularity. It has the good fortune to be written with intelligent skill; it sparkles with delicious fancy, and it is a clean-minded love story that is neither prudish nor stupidly Philistine.

Moreover, we have not discovered any effort to "boom" it by personal paragraphs, or exaggerated comparisons. The opinion of no solemn authority has been evoked in its behalf. But it will be read with increasing favor by the genuine audience of appreciative people, who are the only friends, in a literary way, worth having. Droch.

FLORA (at the seaside): What sort of a fellow is he, anyway?

JULIA: I don't know. I've only been engaged to him since last evening.

ANOTHER VICTORY FOR THE

MISS JONES.

YOU may mention her name, but it never conveys
 An idea of the exquisite tones
 Of her voice or her sparkling, bewildering ways,
 For her name—it is simply, "Miss Jones!"

It gives you no hint of her golden-brown hair;
 Of her eyes that outshine precious stones;
 Of the flash of her wit, or her highly bred air,
 When they merely allude to "Miss Jones."

It leaves you to guess at the men in her train,
 And her suitors' expiring groans;
 At the charm that proves fatal to many a swain—
 Unexpected in every-day "Jones."

But when you have seen the effect of her glance
 On raw youth or decrepit old bones,
 You'll admit that a knight never shattered a lance,
 For a "Queen of the Lists" like "Miss Jones."

If her name could be changed, what a gain it would be—

A fact which she cheerfully owns;
 But, at present, you see, she's confided to me.
 She prefers to stay simply—"Miss Jones!"

A QUARTER BEFORE FIVE.

BAR HARBOR.

BAR HARBOR is the capital of Mt. Desert, which is an island several miles in diameter and several feet high. It is entirely surrounded by water and inhabited by millionaires, who derive a scanty subsistence from its sterile soil by yachting, driving and golfing.

The island abounds in rocks, drives, salt water and girls.

The principal products are morning calls, afternoon teas, and dinner dances. When not attending to the cultivation of these staples the inhabitants are occupied in driving up and down to see that none of the scenery—to which they are much attached—has got away during the night.

Mt. Desert was discovered several years ago—before the Christian Science era—by Frenchmen, who looked over the menu, and finding nothing there within their means, gave their names to several dishes, and left the island to be rediscovered by the hardy race of millionaires who came after them, and who still subsist there.

The dwellings of this curious and interesting people are called cottages, and are constructed of bricks, mortar and bric-a-brac.

The people are gregarious and migratory in habit, nesting and raising their young, and giving dinner parties in their cottages in the summer, while during the winter they migrate to large cities, where they fight and devour other millionaires; the victorious ones returning to Bar Harbor the next season, while the unsuccessful retire to less favored resorts such as Newport, Long Branch or Nantasket.

The millionaire is exceedingly industrious during the summer season, attending most assiduously to the arduous social duties or functions by which he supports existence, and from which he rarely allows himself to be diverted by any considerations of enjoyment or recreation.

The female of the species is deciduous, shedding its plumage frequently — sometimes as often as five or six times in a single day—the feathers generally becoming more and more brilliant as the day advances.

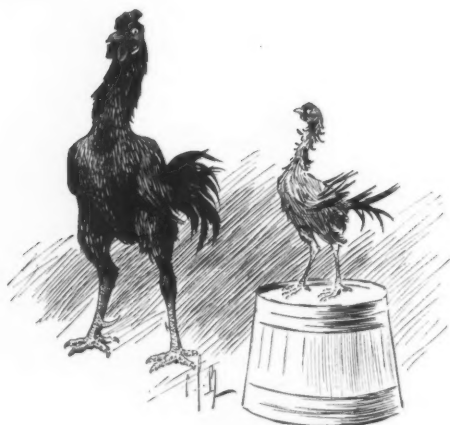

Scientists have been undecided as to whether the brilliant plumage of the female millionaire is protective, or imitative, or for the purpose of attracting the male, though I believe that the best modern thought inclines to the latter opinion.

A RETROSPECT.

HOW many times, dear heart, have we
 Together roamed beside the sea
 When life was young and skies were blue,
 And all the world was fair and new,
 And it was rapture just to be!

And we have traced o'er dale and lea
 The paths that led to Arcady,
 And lingered there the long hours through,
 How many times!

And though our ways, by "fate's decree,"
 Since then have severed been and free,
 I still have kept your memory true,
 Through all these changing years, while you,

Ah, sad coquette, have thought of me—
 How many times?

NO HOPE FOR THE DOG.

PHYSICIANS are rather fond of telling the public that in experiments on living animals pain is reduced to a minimum by the use of anaesthetics. Occasionally a being turns up who accepts this statement, but we think he is rare. Mr. Philip J. Peabody, in the columns of the Boston Transcript, some days ago gave a few interesting facts on this subject:

I have never yet, in all my experience, seen any anaesthetic in, or about, in use in, any laboratory, with one exception. I have a personal acquaintance with many vivisectors, including a number of the best-known ones in this country and Europe, and have hundreds of times conversed with them. No vivisector has ever claimed or pretended to use any anaesthetic, in conversation with me; they have always freely admitted that they never used them, whenever the subject came up.

In the one exception noted, a dog which was about two hours undergoing a very agonizing experiment on the bladder, had tracheotomy performed, solely to stop his howls, as I saw and was also informed. After this a small rubber vessel was at times balanced some distance away from his nose, and for a few times only, and for a few seconds at a time only, it seemed slightly to relieve his agony. The use of this chloroform told me more eloquently than volumes would have done how utterly false was the pretence that animals are saved from suffering by anaesthetics. This dog was breathing through the hole cut in his neck as much as his nose. As a famous English doctor said—it is the public who are anaesthetized, not the animals.

The doctors must have their fun, but it is a grewsome sport, and the appetite seems to grow with what it feeds on. People with kinder feelings, however, are offended by the brazen insolence that perpetrates these disgusting brutalities in the name of science.

These "interesting experiments" bear the same relation to science as do the tortures of the Inquisition to the ten commandments.

"There are others. I thank you, kind sir," she saide.

—New York Sun.

THE two hundred and fifty pupils of the Sunday school of the Fifteenth Street Christian Church had gone through their lesson yesterday forenoon, and most of the children were shifting their feet uneasily when Superintendent Ernest Forbes announced from the pulpit platform that Attorney W. O. Thomas would make a short address and then the benediction would be said. Attorney Thomas mounted the platform with a slow movement and a thoughtful air, and five hundred eyes watched him as he fondled his chain and remarked that he would say a few words about the damage that whisky would do the brain when it was taken into the stomach.

"Now," he said, "is there a boy or girl here who can tell me what is the principal constituent part of the human brain?"

That word constituent befuddled most of the little minds present, but one girl who attends the high school on week days, raised her hand and said, "Albumen."

"That is right," said the lawyer, "albumen forms the principal part of a man's brain. And now can you tell me what forms the principal part of an egg?"

The same girl answered "Albumen" again, and the lawyer looked pleased as he pronounced the answer correct.

TAKEN FROM THE ENEMY.

BISHOP POTTER is credited with telling the story which, more aptly than the thousands of other stories on the same subject, illustrates the abject misery and utter irresponsibility of seasickness. We hardly know why it is, but it cannot be denied that any yarn involving the horrors of mal de mer is seized upon with avidity by the public generally, and with particular gusto by those individuals who have themselves suffered the indescribable wretchedness of that grievous malady.

"I was coming from Liverpool upon one of the famous liners," says Bishop Potter, "and, although the sky was clear and the weather warm, a somewhat tempestuous sea had occasioned more than the usual amount of seasickness among the passengers. As I paced the deck one afternoon I noticed a lady reclining upon one of the benches, and the unearthly pallor of her face and the hopeless languidity of her manner indicated that she had reached that state of collapse which marks the limit of seasickness.

"Touched by this piteous spectacle, I approached the poor creature and in my most compassionate tone I asked: 'Madam, can I be of any service to you?'

"She did not open her eyes, but I heard her murmur faintly: 'Thank you, sir, but there is nothing you can do—nothing at all.'

"At least, madam," said I, tenderly, 'permit me to bring you a glass of water.'

"She moved her head feebly and answered: 'No, I thank you—nothing at all.'

"But your husband, madam," said I, 'the gentleman lying there with his head in your lap—shall I not bring something to revive him?'

"The lady again moved her head feebly, and again she murmured faintly and between gasps: 'Thank you sir, but—he—is—not—my—husband. I—don't—know who he is!'"—Chicago Record.

An evangelist stopping at a suburban hotel fell into conversation with a young man he met there, and just before they parted at bedtime he said:

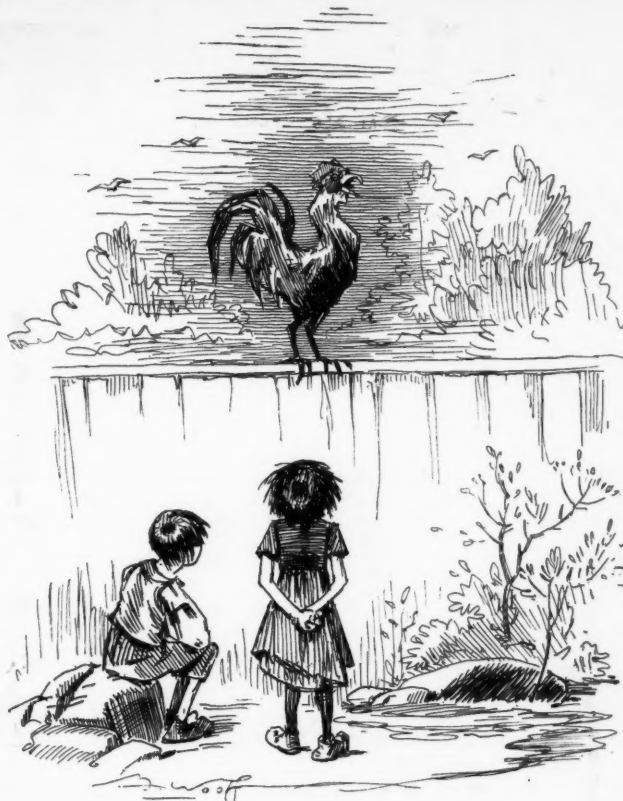

"Young man, do you realize that when you retire to-night you may be called before morning dawns?"

"Do I realize it? Well, I should say I did! I am going to start on a double century run to-morrow, and had left word with the hotel clerk to call me at half-past three. I guess that's before dawn, ain't it?"—Wheel.

"Liz," said Miss Kiljordan's youngest brother, "do you say 'woods is' or 'woods are?'"

"Woods are, of course," she answered. "Why?"

"Cause Mr. Woods are down in the parlor waitin' to see you."—Exchange.

QUITE HUMAN.

"WHAT MAKES A ROOSTER CROW, BILLY?"

"HE'S GOT TER GIV' WAY TER HIS FEELIN'S. HE CAN'T HELP HISSELF!"

"BUT WHEN THE HEN LAYS A EGG HE MAKES THE MOST NOISE."

"AH! THAT'S PRIDE."
